Ripple - David Schwartz

Right. It's not just that Ripple will be advocating for it. It's that Ripple's future value and revenue is directly tied to the future value and liquidity of XRP. For some time, Ripple will be the largest holder of XRP and it will dominate over every other source of value Ripple has.

You think other people don't understand the relationship between Ripple and XRP, but I think it's you that doesn't, or at least aren't doing anything to make it clearer. I think most others do realize that the success of Ripple and the success of XRP are tightly tied. Every bank that uses Ripple Connect is one more endpoint that has no technical obstacles to using XRP. And it's one more reason for other banks to adopt Ripple Connect.

I think people do understand that one day we will have instantaneous international settlement. And I think they do understand that XRP meets the technical requirements for an asset that could do that better than anything else out there. They understand that a bank IOU can't settle instantly unless someone makes it liquid and banks are unlikely to do that at their own expense because they aren't doing that now.

Sure, there are some people out there who don't understand. But honestly, the way you are phrasing it seems more likely to mislead them even more, because I agree with that. But access doesn't mean use. It has yet to be seen that banks will use XRP. Everything I've read so far about the banks state that they are only using the ILP aside from a small group of banks in Asia.

The terms for settlement

Hello,

In case, there will be no trial on the case, what do you guys think will be the settlement terms?

My guess is that SEC wants to forbid Ripple selling XRP to retail. Then they will have to pay a fine (say 50 million) because they did so prior to 2019. That is how SEC will win in this.

But the retail is free of course trade their XRP with each other (or lend their coins to ODL purposes earning passive income).

After all, Claus Schwab & Co wants the retail to own nothing but be happy. There is the profit because I want Claus Schwab & Co to take the businesses of not running

What can I do with my XRP in this bear market?

Now that we are deep in the bear market, (well, deeper at least), I was wondering what to do with my XRP while I wait for sunnier times.

Most of my other assets can be staked but not XRP, (as far as I know).

Is there anything I can do with my XRP to get some kind of small return for the next year or so?

Was David Schwartz tweet an analogy?

Fox News reported that there would be a settlement tomorrow. It was later reported that the info was false. @JoelKatz (David Schwartz) tweeted a story about a house he and his wife tried to buy but before closing he noticed the realtor snuck something into the contract that forced him to pull out of the deal. Coincidence?

P.S. although I did read @JoelKatz tweet earlier I can't take credit for the analogy. I saw it in a comment of some other random tweet.

A theory

I know this isn't the greatest idea for the crypto market in general but hear me out. Since the SEC won the case against LBRY they would like to keep the momentum going in their favor. A loss to Ripple sets them back to square one or at maybe even negative ground. However a settlement keeps the momentum going that they want. On the other hand I would think Ripple if they can get the right settlement would be in really good shape because they would be the only crypto with a clear path with the SEC going forward. They could potentially have a year or two head start on the rest of the market at this point if they received a settlement and a clear path on how to operate going forward in the market? I would think both parties at this point would want to settle ASAP.

Will the Same Scenario Work out For XRP? Even a Loss Might not be a Loss...

While everyone is throwing in the towel for a "total loss" of LBRY to the SEC this week (even John Deaton called it a "total win for the SEC"), the facts should be highlighted, and the FUD should be eliminated.

Did LBRY lose its case to the SEC? It depends on how you look at it, and the real answer may just be ~ not necessarily. Of course, the SEC can put out their press release as having been victorious, and the judge in fact did find in the SEC's favor, but the actual result may be more nuanced (even they point out at the bottom of their release that: "...The Court found that LBRY violated the charged provisions and reserved the determination of relief for a later date." (bolding is mine) But, what is a judgement without relief; ergo, a final consequence? It's still: wait and see...

In order to truthfully assess whether LBRY "lost", and lost in the sense of the word that Wondering how those people in SEC can have a house?

I'm still thinking through the ruling on LBRY, with regards to XRP and the Howey Test:

- an investment of money, in common enterprise, with expectation of profits solely from the efforts of the promoter or a third party

Would appreciate any argument against my examples here.
